SKY DISC OF NEBRA

The World's Oldest Star Map

This is an exact, full-sized replica of the disc recently discovered within a Neolithic woodhenge observatory near Nebra, Germany. The original, bronze with gold plated stars, shows several constellations, including The Pleiades, which can be used to predict the timing of the autumn harvest and lunar eclipses. Symmetrical arcs at the sides mark sunrise and sunset on the solstices and equinoxes. In the center are a crescent and a full moon. [Germany, 1600 B.C.E.]

GNOSTIC CHRIST

The Logos Uttered by Sophia

Gnostic Christian rites bring divine knowledge through revelation of the true nature of God, secrets of the afterlife and words of power. Christ (the anointed one) is a being of pure spirit and light, leading us back to the Good God from the trap of the material world. The Prince of Peace reigns in the Kingdom of Heaven. [America, 1900 C.E.]

HEAVEN AND EARTH...
... Are One Through Me

On sacred ground, heart embracing Heaven and Earth, my hands reach up asking Divine Source to energize my body. I bring the healing light to the Earth as a blessing of abiding love. In union with above and below, I am whole. My soul whispers ~ "Heaven and Earth Are One Through Me." [© Renya Craig] 8¼" terra cotta color Resin-Plus indoor/outdoor. #HNE $49

FROM OUR COVER:

YOUNG ARTEMIS
Arcadian Protector of Children and Animals

This lovely new image of Artemis as a girl reveals her sweet, innocent side as she crouches to soothe a fawn with a gentle hand. She inspires us to love and protect the sacred purity of childhood and nature. [Design by Billie John]

YOUNG PAN
Arcadian Shepherd of Wild Animals

Even as a boy, Pan prefers the solitude of his pipes and his goats. He reminds us to respect the wilder side of nature and to take time for contemplation, love of beauty, and playful fun. [Design by Billie John]

CYBELE & HECATE Powerful Divination

Invite holy madness, and mystic ecstasy. Cybele's rites are filled with throbbing drumbeats and crashing cymbals. Her followers used stone divination cubes and worshiped a sacred black meteorite in her name. The Sybil, Latin for Cybele, prophesied in a cave dedicated to Hecate. Hecate's followers predicted the future at her entrance to the underworld or at a crossroads at midnight. Psychic transformation begins with these powerful goddesses. [Piraeus, Greece, 300 C.E.]

KALI BHAIRAVI Face Your Fear

The Tantras say, "Softly smiling, you shine with a crimson glow that may be compared to a thousand newly risen suns. You wear a silken veil and a garland of skulls. Blood smears your breast. Three voluptuous eyes adorn your lotus face; the moon is your diadem. Your lotus hands show the gestures of victory of wisdom, the granting of boons, and the allaying of fear." She destroys our illusions and desires, freeing us from bondage. One of the ten Objects of Transcendent Knowledge (maha-vidyas).

QUEEN KIYA

Mother of King Tutankhamun

Kiya, the "Greatly Beloved" second wife of Akhenaten, was a powerful foreign princess who became queen after Nefertiti, "the Beautiful Woman has come." Her distinctive hairstyle of overlapping curls, known as the Nubian wig, was popular at Akhenaten's capital at Amarna. [Canopic jar lid, Valley of the Kings, 1340 B.C.E.]

STANDING WORSHIPER

Ambassador to the Divine

His humble pose, with clasped hands and wide-eyed gaze, serves as a constant reminder of your devotion. On your altar, like a votive candle, he keeps prayers active in the mind of the Deity. This sentinel figure was found in the "Square Temple" at Tell Asmar before the statue of a Sumerian God. [Central Mesopotamia, 2750 B.C.E.]

MARY MAGDALENE OF LOMBARD

Reclaim the Magdalene

The Bible says Jesus loved Mary Magdalene more than all other apostles, called her the "Woman Who Knew the All," and often kissed her on the mouth. The Gnostic Gospel, Pistis Sophia, teaches the wisdom of Jesus through a Tantric dialogue with her. Magdalene means "she of the Temple Tower." She is a watchtower among her flock. Her symbol in art is often the alabaster jar of precious ointment with which she christened Jesus and which she carried to his tomb to anoint him. This image is taken from an altarpiece from the Lombard region of northern Italy – near to Da Vinci's Last Supper painting and the coronation site of both Napoleon and Charlemagne.

ZEUS

Ultimate Sky Father

All powerful, wielding lightning bolts, he rules over gods and men. His 40 foot tall colossus, made of ivory and gold, presided over the Olympic Games from a magnificent temple near Mt. Olympus. This statue, one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, was sculpted by Phidias, the greatest of Greek artists, who also decorated the Parthenon. The Romans called him Jupiter and credited him with fathering many other gods and semi-divine heroes. [Olympus, Greece, 460 B.C.E.]

BLUE ISIS

Egyptian Faience Blue

This glazed earthenware finish was the original holy blue of sacred purity. Initiates into the cult of Isis spoke of seeing her sending out rays of blue light of grace and salvation. Her name comes from Egyptian Ashesh, which means both supporting and pouring out (of milk). Isis is called the "Oldest of the Old, who existed from the beginning, the Goddess from whom all beginning arose."

ALLAT

Arabian Moon Goddess

Oaths were sealed with the vow "By the salt, by the fire, and by Al-Lat who is the greatest of all." A triple goddess with Al-Uzza and Menat, her name is the feminine form of Allah and means "the Goddess." The crescent moon of Allat and star of Al-Uzza survive on many Arab countries' flags. Seven priestesses of Allat served at the site of the Black Stone in Mecca, which is set in a large silver mount representing the vulva of the goddess. The priestesses would ritually undress and circle the stone seven times. [Khanaser, Syria, 50 C.E.]
